Cold Thanksgiving Morn

Summary and Recommendation

Fifteen degrees Fahrenheit and six inches of snow on the ground early Thanksgiving in the land of the Pilgrims may be a sign of a particularly cold winter ahead and a particularly good business for natural gas producers. The positive trend for one-year natural gas futures that we showed last week remains positive. Six-year futures may be on the verge of turning positive again as we show this week. At 0.98 times the heating equivalent of oil, six-year futures have the potential to exceed oil by a fourth or so as the competitive interface moves to cleaner fuels and large new increments to supply are delayed. Otherwise there is little change in a week in our detailed calculations for recommended SJT and for CRT and HGT.
